

In 2013, there was a supper club in Mount Pleasant, Vancouver, called the Kozmik Zoo. Don't look for it, it's not there anymore. But one fateful night, a band played their debut show and redefined the word "party funk". They knocked the crowd out with their danceability, their spectacular showmanship — and their modesty.

That band was Canada's now-legendary The Maneuver. Three years, several destroyed disco balls, and too many Amaretto Sours later, The Maneuver is still going strong, and they've earned a distinguished place in rock history as one of Vancouver's funkier bands.

The Maneuver honed their live show playing some of the finest venues in Vancouver, such as Guilt and Co, The Backstage Lounge and the legendary Railway Club (RIP). They have also taken their show on the road and brought to funk to Bowen Island and Squamish.

In late 2016, The Maneuver booked a session at the world famous Warehouse Studio in Gastown, Vancouver. In one massively productive day, the band was able to crank out 4 amazing songs. The EP "Soup of the Day" was released in March 2017.
